A tele-enabled half day workshop on Evidence based Medicine will be held on 28th January 2012 at PGIMER, Chandigarh. The workshop will cover a quick way of searching and applying evidence to clinical practice. The workshop is based on the observation that in outpatient and emergency settings application of available evidence to practice may be suboptimal as time and resources are major constraints in these settings.

The proposed workshop aims to impart skills needed to practice evidence based practice that include framing the right question, searching the various sources of information, critically appraising that information, and applying it to various clinical settings.

The workshop will target interested faculty and senior residents of PGIMER, Chandigarh and G.M.C.H, Chandigarh.

The workshop will be limited to 40 participants and will be of half day duration. The resource faculty have been conducting Cochrane and other systematic reviews and are trained in imparting this training

The tentative program of the workshop will include introductory lectures followed by hands-on group activities related to finding and applying evidence to the clinical setting in consideration. Additionally, each group gives 2 questions pertinent to their practice for which they would want to find an evidence based answer. A shortlist of questions will be taken up for protocol development for systematic review on the topic in a follow up workshop. The workshop will be concluded by a note on 'steps towards inculcating evidence base clinical practice in medical graduates and postgraduates.'

Those interested may please send their names with the registration fee to the 'Organizing Secretary, Tele-enabled workshop on EBM.'

Registration fee Rs 500 ; last date 20.1.2012 ; venue LT-1, Nehru Hospital, PGIMER

The workshop will be broadcast to AIIMS, New Delhi and SGPGI, Lucknow and other centres.
